Myasthenia Gravis is an incurable neuromuscular autoimmune disease that effects approximately 70,000 children and adults of all races in the United States. Patients often do not seek help in the early stages of the disease because they misinterpreted or confuse their symptoms with other ailments.

Myasthenia Gravis Program

In an effort to assist Registered Nurses in the care they provide patients, The Connecticut Nurses' Association, and Connecticut "Nutmeg" State Chapter of the Myasthenia Gravis Foundation of America combined resources to design a program of information that will enhance the nurses knowledge of this disease.

Continuing Nursing Education contact hours for this program will be available until September 1, 2011 for those holding an RN license. All others completing this program can receive a certificate of attendance.
