Narrative Medicine with Ann Marie Chiasson, MD

Thursday, July 30, 2020 from 6:00 – 7:30 PM

Narrative-based medicine involves seeing the patient’s health issue from their perspective and understanding their suffering. Practicing medicine with narrative competence results in a better understanding of the patient’s story, making you a more effective clinician and increasing patient satisfaction.

Ann Marie Chiasson MD, MPH, CCFP is Canadian Board Certified in Family Practice and pursued a Fellowship in Integrative Medicine through the University of Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine. Dr. Chiasson holds an MPH in public health from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and a MD, with honors, from Dalhousie School of Medicine in Nova Scotia, Canada. She completed her residency in Family Medicine in Canada and worked as a primary care physician in Northern Canada for the Central Interior Native Health Service, and in Tucson, Arizona.

Dr. Chiasson has also trained with Dr. Brugh Joy (Joy’s Way & Avalanche) and Maria Elena Cairo. She works with Dr. Lewis Mehl-Madrona (Coyote Medicine, Coyote Healing & Coyote Wisdom) co-facilitating Spirituality and Healing conferences. Dr. Chiasson has had extensive experience exploring energy medicine and alternative healing practices including time spent with Mayan shamanic healers and psychic surgeons in the Yucatan peninsula. Currently, Dr. Chiasson has a private integrative and energy medicine practice in Tucson, AZ where she offers consultations, treatments, seminars, and retreats. She also teaches through the Center for Integrative Medicine at the University of Arizona. She co-authored with Dr. Andrew Weil Self-Healing with Energy Medicine.
